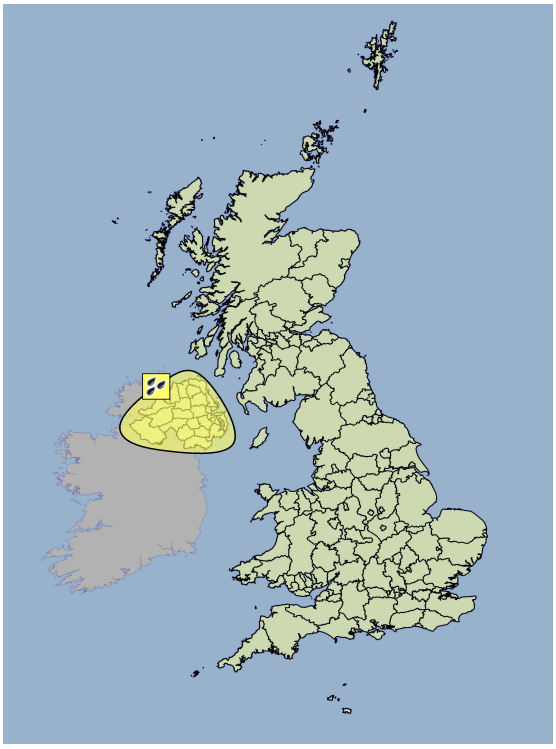
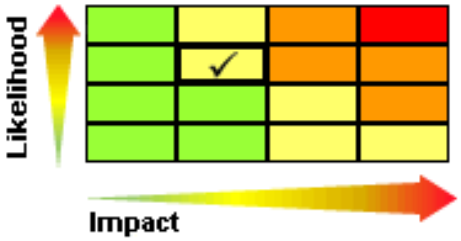
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
As temperatures rise on Saturday afternoon, scattered heavy, locally thundery showers may break out across the west of Northern Ireland during Saturday afternoon. These showers could bring more than 10 mm in an hour. The risk extends to eastern areas by evening, while a separate area of more prolonged heavy rain may also move in from the Irish Sea. This could bring 25-35 mm to parts of Down and Antrim though confidence in this development is currently low.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 15:00 on Sat, 19th Jul 2014 until 03:00 on Sun, 20th Jul 2014

Scattered heavy thundery showers will probably develop across western counties of Northern Ireland during Saturday afternoon and spread east on Saturday evening. There is a possibility that there could also be some longer spells of heavy rain in the east later on Saturday. The rain or showers will ease during the early hours of Sunday morning. The public should be aware of the risk of some surface water flooding which could lead to disruption to transport.
